End-of-the-year Review by Dr. Wolfgang
Brysch,
CEO of MetrioPharm AG

Dear shareholders,

The year 2017 was literally a jubilee year for MetrioPharm AG. We even had two occasions to celebrate:

In March, we received the results of our phase IIa clinical trial in which we evaluated the safety and tolerability of prolonged, continuous administration of MP1032 in patients.

In addition, we had hoped for first indications of the therapeutic efficacy in chronic autoimmune diseases. Psoriasis was chosen as a model disease (proof-of-principle). We are very pleased to have achieved both of these objectives and have thus successfully overcome one of the most important hurdles to market approval of MP1032.

In September, employees and founders of MetrioPharm AG jointly celebrated. It was exactly ten years ago that we moved into our first offices with a small, highly motivated team and began to develop promising drug candidates. We have left these first offices in the meantime, over the years they have become too small for our growing number of employees. The core team of that time still works with us, highly motivated until today.

We take this tenth anniversary as an opportunity to launch a new project: the MetrioPharm Blog. In the future, we will be able to inform our shareholders and the interested public about current projects as well as the background of our work at MetrioPharm AG. In January, you will hear more about this project from our IR department, and I will tell you just so much about it: I am looking forward to the new concept and to contributing right from the start.

Finally, the outlook for 2018: The next phase II clinical trial, in which we will test different doses of MP1032 over a longer period of time, will begin in the spring. The first psoriasis patients are expected to be included in this study in March. The new year looks to be an exciting one and I am looking forward to continuing our successful journey together!

On behalf of the entire team and management of MetrioPharm AG, I wish you a Merry Christmas and relaxing holidays.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Wolfgang Brysch
Chief Executive Officer
